A ship's wheel diagram representing the Division of Risk Management. The wheel is divided into eight segments, each representing a different risk area. The segments are: Employee Injury Compensation, Employee Liability, Employee Assistance, Loss Control, Property, Policy Management, Automobile, and Finance Department. The text "DIVISION OF RISK MANAGEMENT" is written along the top arc of the wheel, and "FINANCE DEPARTMENT" is written along the bottom arc.
